City Climate Finance Gap Fund - Applications Open

Cities account for about 75 per cent of the world's carbon emissions, but are also vulnerable to the impacts of climate change. Many cities have developed plans to address these challenges, however they often lack critical resources and capacity to advance climate resilient and low-carbon infrastructure projects from an idea to a robust business case. This new fund aims to support ambitious infrastructure development for low-carbon, resilient and liveable cities in the Global South.
