Economic Advisory Initiative - experiences from Colombia

By funding economic advisors, the IKI is providing support to its partner countries during the coronavirus crisis to link economic recovery goals with climate and biodiversity goals. One of the first advisors was Mónica Parra, who worked with the national planning authority in Colombia from November 2020 to April 2021. In this interview, she shares her practical experiences within the framework of the "Economic Advisory Initiative".

Find out more about the lessons learnt from her summaries to her colleagues working for the initiative in other countries.
